We Value Your Privacy

Machine Intelligence Research Institute, Inc. ("MIRI") has adopted this Privacy Policy ("Privacy Policy") to provide you, the user of lesswrong.com (the "Website") with information about how MIRI uses certain information it collects when you use the Website. MIRI values your privacy and has adopted this policy in an effort to remain transparent with respect to its collection and use of this information.

For the majority of users, MIRI collects a minimal amount of PII including, but not limited to, IP addresses, geolocation data, pixel tags, web beacons, website pages accessed, and use of the Website. MIRI collects this information so that it may better diagnose problems with its servers, administer the Website, and build statistical metrics used to track website visitor traffic.

MIRI may, however, collect additional PII depending on what you voluntarily provide to it. For instance, MIRI may collect any or more of the following PII when you voluntarily submit it to MIRI:

- Email address;
- First name and surname;

How Your Information May Be Used

As stated above, MIRI's collection of PII is premised on helping you enjoy a better user experience. MIRI obtains PII from its users in order to diagnose problems and properly administer the Website. MIRI does not provide, sell, or rent your PII to anyone outside the organization, except as provided in this Privacy Policy.

The Website also uses "cookie" messages to automatically help provide better services. A cookie may be placed in your computer so that when you visit the Website again, we can remember your preferences based on the information you provided before. accordingly.

Although MIRI does not sell or rent your PII to third parties, MIRI may, however, share your PII with third parties in association with providing the Website.

MIRI may share your PII with its company parents or subsidiaries or to a third party in a sale of MIRI or the Website. MIRI may also share or otherwise use your PII to respond to a duly authorized subpoena or court order, to respond to regulatory requests by government authorities, or where it has a good faith belief that sharing PII is necessary to protect the safety, security, and/or reputation of MIRI, its employees, officers, agents, board of directors, investors, and/or its users, including as part of investigations, or in litigation, and, where necessary, to prevent fraud, false advertising, death, imminent bodily harm, or the violation of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or treaty, whether local, state, provincial, national or international.
